Indian Creek Campground, South Dakota:

Hello to everyone from our expedition crew. The view of the river and moon at 4:30 a.m. Makes us think of what Lewis and Clark and their crew must of seen in the big clear night skies they encountered.

This landscape is so different than Nebraska and the earlier states on the route. Its vastness and sudden depressions are small to the rest of the surrounding plains, but very large to us as we explore.

Stacey, Stuart and the crew.
